Ownership Quotes

Andrew Barroway – Majority Owner, Chairman & Governor of the Arizona Coyotes

“I am thrilled to be here and am thrilled to be an owner and would not have gone through this difficult process in buying a team just to go flip it. I don't think people buy teams to make money. That's not the goal. You try not to lose too much, but no, I certainly did not buy it for a quick flip. I can't state that any more emphatically.”

FoxSports, Jan 2, 2015, Q&A with Coyotes majority owner Andrew Barroway

“We want to find ways to work together and do what's best for the team and do what's best for Glendale.”

Arizona Republic, Jun 9, 2015, Coyotes majority owner meets with City of Glendale officials

“When the teams does well, the city does well. And when the city does well, the team does well. it's a mutually-beneficial relationship, and we'd like for it to be as great as possible.”

Arizona Republic, Jun 9, 2015, Coyotes majority owner meets with City of Glendale officials

“As Commissioner Bettman made clear in his letter to legislators, the Arizona Coyotes Hockey Club cannot survive in Glendale. The Glendale location is wrong -- both geographically and economically -- given its distance from much of the Coyotes' fan base and, in particular, premium ticketholders and corporate sponsors.”

“While we cannot and will not stay in Glendale, we will continue to push our proposed public-private partnership until we either achieve a long-term arena solution in a more economically viable location in the Valley, or we reach the point where there is simply no longer a path forward in Arizona.”

Arizona Republic, Mar 7, 2017, NHL and Coyotes tell Arizona: Give us a new arena or we will leave

“It will get done because it has to get done,” Barroway said. “Failure is not an option here. We're going to get a new stadium in Arizona, where it should have been located to begin with.”

Glendale fiscal forecast grim

“(Glendale’s finance director Tom) Duensing’s forecast shows that the Coyotes deal will cost the city an estimated $8.1 million next year, after revenue associated with the deal.

Councilman Ian Hugh, who voted against the July agreement, said the Coyotes deal pushed the already-struggling city over the edge. There is no easy fix, he said.

“I don’t have the cure,” Hugh said. “But I can tell you what caused the disease.””
